The Dealership Tracker F&I System Now Directly Integrates with RouteOne

RAPID CITY, SD — May 22, 2006 – Supreme Software today announced the integration of The Dealership Tracker F&I system with the RouteOne system for credit application management. The integration has been certified by RouteOne and is currently available for all Supreme Software dealerships throughout the U.S.

Integrating The Dealership Tracker with RouteOne will speed up the credit application and decision process for dealers, as well as reduce data entry errors by eliminating duplicate data entry.

The Dealership Tracker, the Finance and Insurance (F&I) tool, allows dealers to manage their business from their desktops by tracking inventory and sales, maintaining a database of prospects, creating various deal structures and profitability scenarios, and providing a host of reports to monitor activity and results.

"We are always looking for additional tools for our dealers to help them increase their speed and accuracy when doing deals," said Terry Adelman of Supreme Software. "It empowers our dealers to quickly and easily send all their deal information (loan, lease or balloon deals) with a simple mouse click without re-entering any information."

"Our integration with Supreme Software strengthens our service offering," said Mike Jurecki, RouteOne CEO. "As always, we are committed to providing our dealer customers a fast, easy-to-use system that will save them time and money."

"This state-of-the-art Windows®F&I system has the functionality of larger systems, but is also very cost-effective," said Terry Adelman of Supreme Software. "It's what dealers have been asking for. They spoke and we listened." The Dealership Tracker is also integrated with a full accounting system called Autosoft. With this combination, dealers have a complete DMS system that can handle small and large dealerships that is very cost effective. Over 1,300 users have already benefited from deploying The Dealership Tracker F&I and menu selling system.

About RouteOne
RouteOne was formed in 2002 by DaimlerChrysler Financial Services, Ford Motor Credit Company, General Motors Acceptance Corporation, and Toyota Financial Services to create a more streamlined credit application and contracting process for automobile dealers and their customers. With over 22,000 dealers in North America, the RouteOne web-based system allows automotive dealers to submit credit applications to the largest indirect lenders, request credit reports, and increase profitability with RouteOne's free Dealer Reporting Suite. Heavily integrated with the dealer CRM systems, RouteOne offers a common platform for all dealers' financing needs. More information is available at www.routeone.com.
